

Amherst Enterprises Ltd Network SIM Card Walkie Talkie Radio Hire Price List

Tesunho TH288 SIM Card Network Radio

The Tesunho TH288 SIM Card walkie-talkie is a small, light unit weighing only 245g.

The Tesunho radios have a strong spring-loaded belt-clip on the back.

SIM Card Network Walkie-Talkies send their messages over the mobile phone data network.

Because of this, their “range” is effectively unlimited unlike “conventional” walkie-talkies – with the proviso that the radios NEED to be in decent mobile phone network coverage in order to work at all.

So they will NOT be ideal for use in remote areas, and for events such as music festivals or large crowd events where the mobile networks are likely to get “swamped” by lots of calls, texts and mobile internet use in an area where mobile coverage is not designed to handle so many users at once.

The network radios have only one channel, although it is possible for hirers to request that some radios are put in different “groups” for different job roles.

They would be IDEAL for spread-out events in towns and cities where normal walkie-talkies struggle to get their signals very far due to buildings in the way. Also for stewards along the course of a marathon, 10K run or cycle race where the distances are a lot further than normal radios can transmit.

Network radios also have a longer “latency” between the sender saying something and their voice coming out of the other radios.
